Planning Your Time Traveler's Log

inspired by The Time Machine by H. G. Wells

Instructions: Today you'll be writing a description of a time traveler that has two parts. In part one, your time-traveling character will describe what he/she sees as he/she exits the time machine. In part two, your time traveler must draw some conclusions about what he/she sees in the new time.

Character & his/her time period:	Destination time & place:

What is life like for your character in his/her own time? What do people of his/her time period value? What types of government or religion exist?	Describe what this person sees in this new place and time. List vivid descriptive words and figurative language you might use.	What conclusions about life in this new world can your character make? Remember, these conclusions can be right or wrong.

On your own piece of paper, write your two- or three-paragraph scene.
