

Song Title: Cookie Jar Artist: Jack Johnson
How is this a modern version of the children's song?
What represents the cookies/cookie jar?	Who are the "suspects" and what does each do when the finger is pointed at them?
In one sentence, what is the message Jack Johnson is trying to persuade us to agree with? How do you know? What words/lines convey the message most clearly? Do you agree with the message of this song? Were you persuaded? Why or why not?
What are 3 other "kindergarten" messages that you think are still applicable and you would care enough to write a poem about?	What are 3 modern laws that are simply adult versions of these messages.

My Poem

Try and think of 2 children's books/songs/ stories/nursery rhymes that might contain one of your messages from the last box.

What is the message of your children's song/story that you will represent in your story?

How is the message of your children's song/story still relevant today?

In one sentence, what is the most persuasive point you could make about your message?

What objects can be replaced and symbolically represented in your story?

What people or actions can be replaced and symbolically represented in your story?

List 3-5 good "mood" words that represent the tone of your story.
(i.e. humorous, tragic, somber, sarcastic, etc.)

List 3 really good verbs and 3 really good adjectives that might end up in your story.

What are two really good titles that would completely represent your story and message?
