

Three examples with the same opening line:

Which has the best sounding rhythm?

Don't carry lambs to Lake Tahoe.
The water's too cold for their feet.
They'll scream when their feet hit the water,
And they'll bleat, and they'll bleat, and they'll bleat.

Don't carry lambs to Lake Tahoe.
The sand doesn't mix with their wool.
The sun might scorch their small noses,
And your vacation will be out of control.

Don't carry lambs to Lake Tahoe.
The altitude's high, don't you know.
They'll crowd up the beach and probably teach
You to hide in the hills near the snow.
