

What does my hermit crab do when I'm asleep?

by Austin, sixth grade writer

What does my hermit crab do when I'm asleep? First, he checks my vitals to make sure I'm asleep before he makes his move. I believe he crawls into his house, which is a coconut, and digs until he reaches the bottom of his cage. Then he lasers his way through the bottom of the tank and table with his laserclaw™.

To the floor he falls. THIS WAS NOT PART OF THE PLAN because he realizes he is potential prey for a big black fur ball (my dog); fortunately, she was having a party downstairs. (Yet that's another story).

He will dig until sun first appears over the hills. He must continue this process for nights on until he reaches the center of the earth to find the A.W. HQ, Agents at War, which deals with spy business such a defeating Dr. Ka-Ching and his henchman, a group called Ka-Bam. The Center of the Earth may be accessed from anywhere on the earth, which is lucky for the hermit crabs, even though it may take some time to dig there.

My hermit crab is the second most powerful agent. He has had three successful missions so far. One involved the evil Dr. Ka-Ching whose symbol for his gang is $.

Ka-Ching had captured Eugene, the Curly Shell's Treasurer, Number-Six Ranked Agent. Hermie had only his laser claw against 300 Ka-Bam (the name for Ka-Ching's Henchman). He always had been a good climber so when Hermie made his way up his cage, he wall made a laser hole through the top, which fell on top of and knocked out all of the Ka-Bam, and they went to prison. Hermie can always do so much in so little time.

That was his latest mission; I wonder what he will do tonight...