

Four-Metaphor Poems from four sixth-grade poets:

Music

a four-metaphor poem by Dylan

Music is a painting
Beautiful, made originally on paper
A portrait of the mind
And the feelings within.

Music is a program
Much debugging and work
Turns out wonderful
And can make a lot of money.

Music is a game
Fun to play
Hard to make
But many love it.

Music is a song
Many play along
Plays everywhere.

Art

a four-metaphor poem by Caelan

Art is a river
Flowing over the landscape
A never-ending thing
With natural beauty.

Art is time
Constantly changing
Always evolving
And goes on forever.

Art is a mountain
With natural beauty
Bold and inspiring
And comes in all shapes and sizes.

Art is a thumbprint
It has individuality
It is different from everything else
It has "you" written all over it.

Melodies

a four-metaphor poem by Alexa

Melodies are raindrops
Getting bigger as they go
Revealing many secrets
The mystery still stays within.

Melodies are flowers
Progressing through the confusions
Without support from Mother Nature
Will there be an answer.

Melodies are waves
Curling through the atmosphere
Rolling in the mysteries
Of life and leisure.

Melodies are hurricanes
Blowing down the notes
Waiting to uncover more Distant in the wind.

Music

a four-metaphor poem by Paloma

Music is a sunken ship
Hiding secrets in the deep and dark in a chest
Mysteries to be uncovered
But they stay hidden...
For now...

Music is a hidden path in a misty forest
And the path leads to a door
That opens in the moonlight.

Music is a key
To a box that reveals
The secrets of love.

Music is passion
Music is all.
