

My Hats

As a student in this class, you wear many hats. Sometimes, you think like a writer and need to wear your writing hat. Other times, you think like a reader and need to wear your reading hat. Look at the hats below. Decide which one is your reading hat, and which one is your writing hat. Then, in each of the hats, brainstorm what you think about when you wear them. You might include vocabulary you use, questions you ask, things you don't want to forget, and behaviors you show. To exceed standards, think about other shapes or forms that your hats might take. Turn this paper over and sketch them!
