Title and Topic of my book:
Before reading my book, here are some things I brainstormed about my topic. These are some of the positive ideas and images that come to mind when I think of this topic...
Here are some things that I learned about my topic as I read. Most of them are darker things about this person/event/era than I knew or thought about...

Turn those facts into a bunch of potential questions for the game show we will play called, “Who (doesn’t) Want to be a Millionaire?” When you have 12 to 15 questions, rank them in order of importance and/or difficulty. Finally transfer the 11 best questions (with four multiple choice answers) onto index cards to be turned in. Each question should be assigned a dollar value. (The 11 values are...$50, $100, $250, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $50,000, $100,000, $250,000, $500,000 and $1,000,000)

For my persuasive essay, these are three to five important facts I want to remember to use as support for my argument...
